Sea level rise in the Pacific

The impact of climate change on low-lying atolls and a local perspective on the 2015 Paris Climate Conference

Maria Tiimon works as Pacific Outreach Officer for the Edmund Rice Centre and is part of the Centre's climate advocacy initiative, the "Pacific Calling Partnership". Her role includes raising awareness in schools and communities of how climate change is affecting the Pacific islands, especially the Kiribati Islands, from where she originates. She has just attended the UN Climate Change Conference in Paris (COP 21) where she gave a testimony about the impact of climate change in Kiribati.
