

☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆ ACADEMIC DISHONESTY ☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆

PLANETOLOGY 143353
INTRODUCTION TO PLANETOLOGY

Wintersemester 2014-2015, Mo, 8:30-10:00 AM, IG 1, SR E

Harald Hiesinger
Institute of Planetology, Wilhelm-Klemm-Str. 10, Room 111c, Phone: 83-39057
Hiesinger@uni-muenster.de
Office hours: Wed 8-10, Thu 8-10, or by appointment

1. Introduction

Every year there is a very small number of students that violate the academic code of conduct. Students most commonly violate the academic code in the following ways:

- Unauthorized collaboration on technical assignments, such as computer science programs, laboratory reports, etc;
- Submission of written work which is in whole or in part plagiarized from other sources: this includes papers or material copied from fellow students, from published sources such as articles or books, and most recently from websites or internet paper mills;
- Altering of exam or homework answers for resubmission and additional credit, and submission of the same written work to each of two different courses;
- Cheating from a fellow student or from prohibited materials on an in-class exam.

2. Consequences

I will have a zero tolerance rule on violations of the academic code of conduct. A violation of this code is not tolerated in any form whatsoever. Any suspected violators will not receive any credit on the exercise/test or the entire course.

3. Strategies

Academic integrity is an important part of your professional career. Please be careful to avoid academic dishonesty. While I encourage scientific discussion among students, I insist that each student submits his or her own work. If you are uncertain about what is considered a violation of the honor code, please talk to me before you turn in your exercise/test. I will be glad to assist you.