How we Got Here – Decision Matters

The ethnographic documentary films members of one family belonging to a caste of farmers and pastoralists in rural India telling a history of decision-making across three generations. The story begins with the self-decision of one man that effected marital decisions upon close relatives of his own and subsequent generations. Through a combination of oral narratives and visualization of the setting, the film depicts an arrangement of decision-making linking emotions, cultural values and marital practices in a socio-ecological environment.
