

Colloquium Origenianum Tertium Decimum
Monday, August 15th – Friday, August 19th, 2022
Origen and Philosophy: A Complex Relation

7th Circular Letter, August 2022

Dear Participants of the Origeniana XIII!

I hope you all have arrived safely and healthy back home! Many thanks again for your participation in the Origeniana XIII – it was great having you here in Münster!

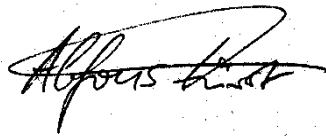

In this last circular letter concerning this colloquium, I provide you with some information about the publication of the papers:

As usual, the conference volume will be published by Peeters in the BETL series. The length of each paper must not exceed 15 pages (ca. 6500 words maximum). I kindly (and strongly) ask you to observe this limit (and, of course, shorter papers are welcome) so that it is possible to include as many papers as possible into the volume (the two last volumes, Origeniana XI and XII, contained ca. 50 papers, and this will approximately be also the size of Origeniana XIII). To reach this goal, there will be a review process to select the most valuable papers and to ensure the quality of the volume.

Together with this information, I send you the stylesheet of the publisher. Please stick closely to its rules! Contrary to the stylesheet, an abstract is not necessary (this will spare space in the volume). The papers can be in English, French, and German. If you are not a native speaker of the language in which you write your paper, please make sure that it has been checked by a native speaker.

The deadline for submitting papers is 31 December 2022. Please send the papers to the email address of the conference (see below). Earlier submissions are of course very welcome!

Yours sincerely,

Alfons Fürst (Münster, organizer)
