

Münster Delegation travelled to World Model United Nations in Taipei, Taiwan

Take six students from Münster University, put them on a plane across the Caucasus and you will find them fighting corruption, money laundering and terrorism in the Middle East in form of four royal Swazis and two Austrian republicans.

The Münster delegates to World Model United Nations 2010 in Taipei, Taiwan conferred with some 1,900 students from all over the world from March 14 until March 18, 2010.
Five days of conference, five nights of parties: Global Village, Chinese Lunar
New Year, Cabaret, Kung Fu night and Farewell absolutely contributed to strengthening ties between delegates and chairs. Ideas of how to change the world were exchanged in sessions, as well as more or less fabulous dance moves at night.

Outside of committee, there was time to explore Taipei and see temples, museums, get a taste of Taiwanese cuisine and Gold medal beer on night markets and general big city flair of noise (mostly because of a sheer infinite amount of scooters) and bright Mandarin signs everywhere. There were also some in-conference visits, conferences and post-conference trips professionally planned by Harvard, affectionally carried out by National Taiwan University (NTU) Host Team. We really believed all those incredibly nice and hospitable NTU volunteers' greetings us with “Welcome to Taiwan”.

The great variety of academic and cultural impressions surely resulted in a short-term sleep deficit, but furthermore left a more long-term mark on every delegate. Five days full of hard work and fun have created an intense and memorable experience for the Münster delegates.
