Please indicate in the overview which courses from your relevant degree programme make up the required 70 credit points from required coursework and degree-relevant examinations in Communication Science, Journalism Studies, or Media Studies. These credits must be equivalent to the content or modules studied in the Bachelor's degree programme in Communication Science at the University of Münster or they must appropriately compliment the social science orientation of the subject. Please note the following requirements for the relevant 70 credit points:

- A maximum of 10 credit points from practical media and communication courses
- At least 10 credit points in approaches and theories
- At least 20 credit points in empirical research methods relevant to the field of study
 - Of these, a maximum of 10 credit points in empirical project seminars, research seminars, or in an empirical Bachelor's thesis
 - Of these, at least 5 credit points in statistics

All courses listed below must be derived from your certificate/transcript of records and stated in the module handbook, which must also be uploaded.

The term credit points (CP) refers to credit points from the European Credit Transfer System (ECTS).

Degree programme:

1. 70 degree-relevant credit points

Please list courses totalling at least 70 credit points with a course content relevant to the study of Communication Science (for details, see above). In the column "Practical Media Studies", please indicate which courses are practical media or practical communication courses. A maximum of 10 credit points can be earned through such courses. Please also list here the courses on approaches and theories, as well as courses on relevant empirical research methods; they are to be listed additionally under points 2 and 3.

3. 20 credit points in subject-relevant empirical research methods

Please list the courses mentioned under point 1 that dealt with relevant empirical research methods (survey methods and evaluation procedures/statistics) here again. List courses totalling at least 20 credit points. In the "Statistics" column, please indicate which courses are statistics courses. At least 5 credit points must be earned in the field of statistics. In the "Empirical project" column, please also indicate which courses are empirical project/research seminars or an empirical Bachelor's thesis. A maximum of 10 credit points can be earned through such courses. If it is not clear from your module handbook exactly what proportion of a course taught basic knowledge of the relevant empirical research methods and/or what proportion of a course is assigned to the field of statistics, please upload the relevant course descriptions in addition to the module handbook.

Which software programmes have you worked with in quantitative and qualitative research courses?

Did you specify an empirical Bachelor's thesis under 3? If yes, please provide here some details about your thesis:

Title:

Research question:

Method:

Have you already submitted your Bachelor's thesis? Yes No

Have the credit points for your Bachelor's thesis already been recorded? Yes No

Note:

If the credit points for the Bachelor's thesis which you have already submitted have not yet been recorded, please upload a certificate from your supervisor under "Other" to prove that you have definitely passed the Bachelor's thesis. Only with such a certificate can the credit points for the yet unrecorded Bachelor's thesis be included in the calculation.

If applicable, space for additional comments (optional):

If you have the impression that a course title, the uploaded module handbook, and the uploaded course description are not meaningful enough, you have the opportunity to explain the content of the courses here. It is your responsibility to attach appropriate supporting documents or confirmations. Please indicate them here and upload the relevant documents in the application portal under "Other". Important: This option is a special case. Generally, it is sufficient to provide the course title according to your transcript of records and to upload the module handbook and the course description.
